DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (If known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE
This townhouse was designed by Josias Pennington Jr., and served as his private residence. Mr. Pennington and his partner, E. Francis Baldwin, were responsible for the design of the Mount Royal Station of the B&O Railroad, opened in 1896; the Maryland Club, 1891; St. Mary's Seminary; and additions to the State House in 1905. The four story ashlar dwelling is accented by stone sills, as is typical of Renaissance Revival architecture, an ornamental belt course above the fourth floor windows and wrought iron baskets projecting from the second floor oriel. To the left of the recessed entrance are two rectangular, double hung, 1/1 windows which allow light into the English basement. Uncharacteristic of this Renaissance Revival facade is the bowed oriel window on the second floor. The tripartite, rectangular, double hung, 1/1 windows are united by decorative stonework with egg and dart molding. Above each window are elaborate medallions; below the oriel, and running the length of the facade, is an ornamental belt course. The third and fourth floors are two bays wide with proportionally scaled double hung, 1/1, rectangular windows. The flat roof is crowned by a bracketed cornice with dentils.
